The Peace Deck offers 1. inspiration, 2. practical tips, 3. further insight, and 4. goal-setting tools to help us act on the biblical vision of Shalom, peace with justice. (The colors of the cards roughly match those themes: 1. gray, 2. ivory, 3. green, 4. salmon.) The Deck can help extend our meditation or spiritual discipline into our daily life: commute, work, breaks, exercise....

Using the Peace Deck. One powerful method is to focus on just one card of each color at a time, reading and reflecting on them throughout the day. Gradually identify ones that support your next steps in growth.

Begin with a time of silence, letting go of tensions or issues, becoming more centered, more present. Read a few cards, pausing to allow their insights to engage you. Notice what resonates... what gets in your way or feels challenging... what “speaks” to you. Think of ways you might act on what you discovered. Write down 1 or more goals + next steps for yourself, using the lined cards (3 are blank for additional goals).

Adult, youth, and social justice groups have found the Peace Deck helpful in exploring, discussing, and encouraging action on peace & justice commitments. Pair up to check in by phone or in-person to discuss insights and progress toward goals. Remember that advice is rarely as useful as listening and support.

The Peace Deck offers four distinct sets of cards, in four colors, 1. gray, 2. ivory, 3. green, 4. salmon:
1. quotes to help inspire and deepen discipleship;
2. leadership and action ideas, reminders, and links;
3. encouragement & insight to help address difficulties;
4. tools to define & take on goals, next steps, barriers.
The deck’s open format lends itself to creative use and its breadth offers insight on a wide range of concerns.

Explore – Many quotes will be new, offering fresh ways of seeing our calling. You may find familiar texts resonate in unexpected ways. Pick a card of each color to read and reflect on several times a day.

Focus – Identify insights or themes you find especially meaningful or encouraging. Notice cards that offer help or inspiration on particular concerns. Carry them around in a sleeve to re-read and reflect on throughout the day.

Set Goals – Use what touches you to encourage your growth and development in discipleship. Lined cards can help you identify and pursue specific goals & next steps.

Experiment – Talk regularly with someone for mutual encouragement about Shalom practice (listening more than advising). Use with practices such as lectio divina.

Peace Deck

"Shalom" means more than just peace. The biblical word fully includes the concepts of justice, inclusive community, wholeness, grace and gratitude.

The Peace Deck highlights aspects of our discipleship that are often minimized or hidden in our culture. The world emphasizes getting rather than sharing, valuing things more than people; maintaining privilege, encouraging one another to transcend our fears, and to educate, organize, develop skills, and model faithfulness. We are about deepening discipleship, including the concepts of justice, community and solidarity, grace and gratitude.

Whenever we say, hear or seek peace, we are invited to grow into this deeper vision of peace. May it encourage you as you grow and act on this deeper vision of peace.
